We start one business. The other five wait.

Sub Radar is the one. A general contractor pays $149 for a 48-hour check of up to 40 subs against the public license board, then $399 a month to have it rechecked every weekday. You ping them only when a license, bond, or workers-comp flag changes. First dollar does not need Google, Amazon, or anyone's password.

The rest, in order:

When	What	Why it waits
Day 90	Trade Map Desk, $449/mo	Same contractors, different check. Their Google listing.
Month 6	Seat Sniper, $400/mo	Needs admin keys. Don't ask a stranger for those in week one.
Not unless a county allows it	Parcel Watch	Some counties ban reselling tax data. Weak monthly pain. I would not bet on it.
Not until Sub Radar is paying	Amazon listings and price memos	Real offers. Also the ones that can get the shared computer blocked and stop the whole fleet.

$30k a month is not one clever offer. Sub Radar alone, inside 20 hours a week, tops out around $12k–$16k. The rest of the path is Trade Map on those same clients, Seat Sniper later, and a contractor after month 3 to clear exceptions.

This week is only Sub Radar: one state board, read its terms, run 20 lookups until they match a human, then email contractors who already name subs on their site. If day 7 is $0, change the city, not the business.
